President . . .

CHARLES G. SMITHER

Charles G. Smither has more irons in the fire than a burning golf club factory.

The popular state senator heads one of New Orleans' leading insurance agencies and is a director of several local businesses, including Arrow Food Distributors, Inc., Jefferson Cold Storage, Inc. and Associated Cold Storage, Inc.

He is a member of the Board of Administrators of Tulane University and is chairman of the board of Kalvar Corp., manufacturers of heat developing photographic products.

Public spirited and civic minded, Smither was the last general chairman of the Community Chest before it became part of the United Fund and was promptly named vice president of the United Fund at the time of its organization. He has served on the Vestry of the St. Andrews Episcopal Church and is now on the board of trustees of the Episcopal Diocese of Louisiana.

He was a co-founder of the Crippled Children's Hospital of New Orleans and this achievement stands out as his most gratifying endeavor.

He was elected to the Louisiana Senate last fall after having been elected to the House of Representatives in 1962 and re-elected in 1964.

A New Orleans native, Smither graduated from Tulane University in 1936 with a B.A. degree. He lettered for the Green Wave football team as a guard and played 53 minutes in the inaugural Sugar Bowl game against Temple, Jan. 1, 1935.

Married to the former Charlotte Hardie of New Orleans, Smither is the father of one son, Charles H., and two daughters, Mrs. Denis H. McDonald and Charlotte. His wife was queen of Mardi Gras the year they were married in 1939 and his older daughter, Louise (Mrs. McDonald) was queen in 1965. To have two Mardi Gras queens in one family is indeed rare. And not to be left out, the younger daughter, Charlotte, was named Queen of Comus in 1967.

Smither doesn't claim credit for bringing pro basketball to New Orleans although he was one of the team's original stockholders. He is responsible, however, for keeping the Buccaneers in operation.

SMITHER

THE CROWD'S APPROVAL of the Bucs' Western Division championship play-off victory over Dallas is illustrated by this scene on the court as Red Robbins slowly squeezes through to the dressing room.

JAMES H. (BABE) MCCARTHY

The New Orleans Buccaneers didn't win the 1967-68 American Basketball Association championship and Babe McCarthy wasn't named Coach of The Year. Nevertheless, the first-year record of the Bucs and their colorful coach is without parallel in professional basketball.

McCarthy coached the Western Division squad in the ABA's inaugural All-Star classic; his Buccaneers captured the first regular season divisional title, and the Bucs surged to the finals of the league's initial post-season play-offs.

The 45-year-old McCarthy (born Oct. 1, 1923), a smooth-talking Southern gentleman from Baldwin, Miss., modestly shuns credit for the Buccaneers' first-year success. "We had a bunch of players with talent, stamina and a desire to win," he explains. "These things plus a favorable schedule in the early going gave us momentum and we just kept going."

MCCARTHY

What about 1968-69?

"I will gladly settle for a repeat of last season's record," says The Babe, "because the whole league is improved and victory will be tougher to achieve every time out."

James Harrison McCarthy achieved enough victories during his 10 years at Mississippi State University (1955-1965) to rate him among the greats of the Southeastern Conference. His four SEC titles rank him second only to Kentucky's Adolph Rupp in conference crowns and his 169-85 record at MSU is among the league's best career marks. He was subsequently rewarded with three Coach of The Year plaques.

His first SEC crown came in 1959, Bailey Howell's senior year. The other three came back-to-back in 1961, 62 and 63. Two of his State teams had 24-1 records but McCarthy looks upon 1962-63 as his most memorable season. The Bulldogs that year (22-6) entered the NCAA Mid-East Regional and after bowing to eventual champion Loyola of Chicago, 61-51, defeated powerful Bowling Green, 65-60, for third place.

McCarthy came to the ABA last season after a one-year tenure at George Washington University where his club had a 6-18 record.

The Babe's coaching career began in 1946-47 in his hometown at Baldwin (Miss.) High School where he promptly turned out a state championship team his first season.

After three seasons at Baldwin, McCarthy returned to active duty with the Air Force during the Korean conflict. A transport pilot during World War II, his second hitch included a coaching assignment. He coached a Memphis Air Force Base team to a third place finish in the World-Wide Air Force Tournament.

McCarthy returned to coaching on the junior high level in Tupelo, Miss., but left the profession to accept a position with an oil company in Clarksdale, Miss.

McCarthy didn't play basketball in college, but he loved the game and remained close to it by officiating in his spare time.

Babe's careers in officiating and the oil business came to an abrupt end in 1955 when he accepted an invitation to return to his alma mater and take over the basketball reins. So began the Babe McCarthy Era at Mississippi State University.

MAURICE STERN

Maurice M. Stern, a prominent New Orleans Chartered Life Underwriter, doesn't merely hold down a position in the Buccaneers' front office; he is the front office.

One of the club's original stockholders, Stern last season served as its treasurer and as a member of the board of directors. With Club President Charles Smither absorbed in his many business and political activities and with Coach Babe McCarthy busily engaged in directing the show on the court, a need arose for someone to run the business.

The man for the job had to have a sound business head, the respect of the community and a keen sense of responsibility. That man was Maurice Stern. He thus assumed the position of operations manager at the conclusion of the 1967-68 season.

The 52-year-old New Orleans native, who received an A.B. degree, cum laude, in 1936 from Harvard University at the age of 19, has been associated with the Union Central Life Insurance Company in New Orleans since 1948.

Aside from a large assortment of distinguished professional achievements for which he was honored by the insurance industry, Stern has devoted much of his time and efforts to worthwhile community and civic projects.

He has served as a local director and in many instances attained the presidency of a large number of charitable and educational institutions and has also successfully headed various fund raising campaigns.

He headed a committee responsible for bringing into being a community center in one of the city's low income areas and is now a member of the recently completed center's board of directors.

Stern, married to the former June Barkerding of New Orleans, has two daughters, Charlotte 19 and Deborah 17.

STERN

FULTON

Robert Fulton is into his second season with the Buccaneers organization, serving as the club's publicity and public relations director after a 1967-68 tenure as its publicist.

The 33-year-old Fulton, a native of Jackson, Miss., spent 13 years as a sportswriter in Mississippi. Prior to joining the Bucs he was sports editor of the Meridian (Miss.) Star three years.

A 1953 graduate of Jackson Central High, Fulton began sportswriting during the off-seasons while playing professional baseball. He turned to writing sports full time and playing semi-pro baseball parttime in 1955 and spent 10 years on the sports staff of the Jackson Clarion Ledger.

He coached American Legion baseball in Jackson two years, his 1964 club winning the state championship.

Married to the former Augusta Hutton of Jackson, he is the father of two daughters, Cynthia 6 and Michelle 2.

Trainer . . .

ARTHUR W. (BILL) KALEHER

Arthur W. (Bill) Kaleher is a stranger to New Orleans but by no means is he a stranger to the sports world. He has served as a coach and trainer for 14 years.

Kaleher, 45, a native of Louisville, Ky., joined the Buccaneer organization during the off-season after serving as trainer at Regis College in Denver, Colo.

He graduated at the University of Louisville in 1954 after interrupting his education to serve in the U.S. Navy during World War II and the Korean conflict. He spent a total of 10 years in the Navy and Naval Reserve.

Kaleher began his coaching career in 1949 at Louisville's Flaget High School where he coached a promising young freshman quarterback by the name of Paul Hornung. After receiving his degree he served as an assistant in football and basketball at Shepherdsville, (Ky.) High School. He went to Regis College in 1959 as an assistant basketball coach, serving under Joe Hall who is now an assistant to Adolph Rupp at Kentucky.

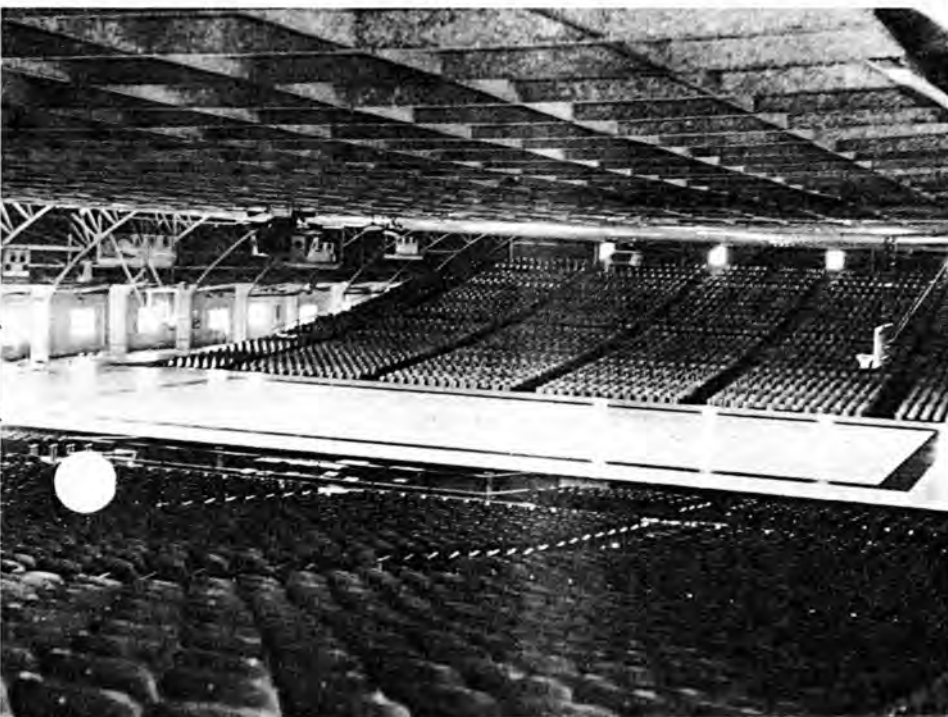

Kaleher left Regis in 1961 to accept a coaching job at Westminster (Colo.) High and returned in 1966 to the Denver college.

Bill served as the Bucs' trainer last season when the club played at Denver.

He is married to the former Lois M. Livers of Louisville. They have five children, Arthur 20, twins Janet and Janice 16, Pat 6 and Mary Ellen 3.

BUCS, OAKS LED TRADE PARADE

As in all professional sports, trading is considered routine and part of the game. Few off-season player transactions, however, have received as much newspaper ink and air time on radio and TV as did New Orleans' 3-for-2 swap with Oakland last spring.

The Bucs dealt Doug Moe, the loop's No. 2 scorer, and ABA assist champ Larry Brown to Oakland in exchange for forward Ron Franz and guard Steve Jones and Barry Leibowitz. Leibowitz, who is working in Israel, has been placed on the voluntary retired list but is still the property of the Bucs.

Almost as stunning was the selling of Rookie of The Year Mel Daniels by Minnesota to the Indiana Pacers.

Everything else has been comparatively mild on the trading market, with the most noteworthy deals including Denver's acquisition of Bob Verga from Dallas in exchange for Bob Bedell, New York's obtaining Maurice McHartley from Dallas, Miami's securing of Willie Murrell from Denver, Houston's getting Tom Hoover from Denver and Kendall Rhine from Kentucky in exchange for Wilbert Frazier and the Buccaneers acquiring the negotiation rights to Glynn Saulters.

The Buccaneers this season are playing eight of their home games elsewhere in Louisiana and Mississippi. Four of the "home away from home" games are being played in the Mississippi Coliseum in Jackson, Miss. where the Bucs averaged 5,000 fans in two appearances last season. Monroe's Civic Center is the site of three games and the other is Lafayette, La.

During the 1968-69 ABA season, the Buccaneers will log some 48,559 air miles. They will be jetting around the country to play 39 road games plus eight "home" games away from New Orleans.

There is no way to accurately measure the strides taken by the American Basketball Association since its conception early in 1967.

Considering the many obstacles and problems it confronted at the outset, many skeptics were surprised that the new league was even organized not to mention its commencement of play in the fall of 1967. Disbelievers were additionally amazed that the ABA was still in business at season's end.

Now, with a new look and a priceless year of experience under its belt, "The Lively League" is into the second season of its history.

As anticipated, 1967-68 wasn't all peaches and cream not to mention financially profitable; neither will 1968-69 be for the most part. However, many mistakes made during the first year aren't being repeated the second. Franchise shifts and a few adjustments in club administrations have overcome weaknesses and remedied deficiencies.

The ABA's major accomplishment thus far has been the establishing of an image. There is no doubt that a new major league has made the scene, one that now has both a history and a future. The red, white and blue basketball has become a symbol of the league and the three-point field goal a characteristic that has increased excitement.

Eleven teams are again playing a 429-game schedule, but they aren't exactly the same teams that competed last season. The Los Angeles Stars have replaced the Anaheim Amigos, the New Jersey Americans have moved to the other side of Manhattan to become the New York Nets, the Minnesota Muskies have gone South to Miami to become the Floridians and the Pipers, although still Pipers, are in Minneapolis-St. Paul where they are defending their championship under the name Minnesota Pipers.

The 11 teams, divided into divisions and listed in order of their 1967-68 finish, are:

WESTERN

New Orleans Buccaneers
Dallas Chaparrals
Denver Rockets
Houston Mavericks
Los Angeles Stars
Oakland Oaks

EASTERN

Minnesota Pipers
Miami Floridians
Indiana Pacers
Kentucky Colonels
New York Nets

Adding to the new look this season is the presence of three new coaches. Alex Hannum, former coach of the NBA's San Francisco Warriors and Philadelphia 76ers, is guiding the resurgent Oakland Oaks. Former Boston Celtic star Bill Sharman, the coach of the San Francisco Warriors the last two seasons, is at the Los Angeles Stars' helm. Jim Harding, former coach at Loyola of New Orleans, is the new Minnesota coach.

In addition, there are fresh new faces on the court, many of them exciting rookies who were in the collegiate limelight last season. Off-season trades have strengthened several clubs.

Yes, much to the dismay of the skeptics and to the delight of its thousands of fans, the ABA is indeed off the ground and here to stay.

THE BUCS, 1968-69

The New Orleans Buccaneers have a new look this season and it has to do with three luxuries which the Bucs were somewhat short on in 1967-68, namely depth, especially in the backcourt, and youth and muscle on the front line.

A divisional championship was won by the Bucs last season despite the three chinks in their armor, but Babe McCarthy, being the Mississippi gambler that he is, decided not to stick with a pat hand. Instead, he asked for a new deal that has resulted in a stronger entry in the 1968-69 ABA race.

"We couldn't afford to stand pat, said McCarthy. "It became obvious late in the 1967-68 season that every team in the league was improving. We knew we had to strengthen ourselves and remedy our weaknesses to keep pace."

The shortage of premium backcourt depth came into focus in the sixth game of the championship play-off with Pittsburgh. Their two starting guards in foul trouble, the Bucs blew a 13-point halftime lead and a chance to win the title.

Steps to correct the deficiencies have been taken by way of a trade with Oakland and the signing of enough promising young rookies to call the Bucs' new look a youth movement. As a result, the Bucs have four blue-ribbon guards in contrast to the two who did the bulk of the playing last season and the team has more muscle, youth and depth on the front line.

On paper, the Buccaneers are improved. McCarthy, realizing full well that pro basketball is played on hardwood, not on paper, is reluctant to predict the result. "We're putting a better team on the floor this time around, but I don't know if our record will be better. It will be a lot tougher to win this season because of the improvements made by the other teams."

Obtained in the trade with Oakland were guard Steve Jones and forward Ron Franz. (Guard Barry Leibowitz also came in the package, but is working in Israel and has been placed on the Bucs' voluntary retired list.)

"We had to give up quality to obtain quality," explained McCarthy, "and we had to give thought to the future."

In addition, the Bucs signed rookies Mike Butler of Memphis State, Lee Davis of North Carolina College and Jasper Wilson of Southern University during the off-season. David Williams, another rookie from Mississippi State, was added to the roster after a successful tryout in September. The club also acquired the rights of Olympic cager Glynn Saulters of Northeast Louisiana State College.

Davis, 23, a burly 240-pounder, is joining returning starter Red Robbins and reserve Gerald Govan to form a three-man pivot corps.

Franz, 23, the key man in the Oakland trade, heads an aggregation of forwards that includes veteran Jack Moreland, the 21-year-old Wilson and 22-year-old Williams.

The backcourt, which appears to be McCarthy's strong suit, features All-Rookie James Jones, last season's No. 2 scorer. Steve Jones, Butler and Saulters figure to furnish plenty of depth and if necessary reserves Peter Mitchell of Georgetown University and New Orleans and Marlbert Pradd of Dillard can be summoned.

McCarthy sums up his club's chances this way: "We're playing every game this season with the same attitude we had in 1967-68, but with more emphasis on defensive aggressiveness, more fight and more zip."

JAMES JONES

Born—January 1, 1945

Height—6 ft., 4 in.

Weight—188 pounds

Home—Tallulah, La.

College—Grambling ('67)

JONES

Durable and dependable Jimmy Jones is one of those workhorse athletes who plays every game and can be counted upon to have a dozen good nights for every mediocre one.

As a rookie last season, Jones logged more playing time than anybody in the ABA. He played 3,255 minutes for an average of 41.7 per game and went the entire 48 minutes nine times.

He wasn't selected to the ABA's All-Rookie team just because of his durability. Jones made the most of his playing time by averaging 18.8 points a game.

He was the No. 2 scorer on the club and the second most accurate shooter from the floor, hitting on 46.6 per cent of his shots. He was also the second best scorer for the Bucs, in their 17 play-off games, averaging 22.1 points.

A 35-point outburst against Indiana in the second game of the season was Jimmy's best scoring night, but he followed with four other 30-plus performances and hit in the 20's 25 times.

Probably the best clutch player on the club, Jones came through with numerous game-saving buckets when the chips were down. "Anytime we need a basket, I had as soon see Jimmy shoot as anybody," says Coach Babe McCarthy.

Equipped with a high-arc jump shot, quick reflexes and an uncanny instinct for finding his way to the bucket, Jones is one of the best in the business when it comes to going one-on-one against anybody. He has what it takes to be one of the best all-around backcourt men in the league.

Jones came to the Bucs from talent-rich Grambling College where he had averaged 25 points during his senior season (1966-67). He was New Orleans' No. 1 draft choice and was drafted in the second round by the Baltimore Bullets of the NBA.

James is married to the former Willie Jean Randell of Tallulah. They are the parents of one son, Michael, age 3.

RON FRANZ

Born—October 20, 1945

Height—6 ft., 7 in.

Weight—207 pounds

Hometown—Kansas City, Kan.

College—Kansas ('67)

Rugged, handsome Ron Franz is dedicating himself to two missions: (1) convincing everybody the Buccaneers made a good trade in obtaining him from Oakland and (2) living up to his advance billing as a "can't miss" pro prospect.

Franz, one of the ABA's more polished players last season, came to the Bucs in a trade that sent Doug Moe and Larry Brown to Oakland.

FRANZ

While appearing in 74 games, Franz ranked as Oakland's second highest scorer with 930 points and a 12.6 average. He was selected to the ABA All-Rookie second team.

So impressive was the blonde Kansan that no less than five ABA clubs tried to obtain him from the Oaks during his rookie season. Since becoming the property of the Bucs, three teams have extended trade offers to Coach Babe McCarthy.

Drafted 5th by the Detroit Pistons and 10th by Oakland in 1967, Franz was one of the University of Kansas' most prized products. He led the Jayhawks in rebounding his senior season and his 737 points and 9.3 average ranks him 15th on the school's all-time scoring list.

A high school All-American at Kansas City's Bishop Ward High ('63), Ron was a subject in a Sports Illustrated story about the pressures encountered in college recruiting.

Franz, 23, weighs 207 pounds and handles himself with authority around the boards, thus giving the Bucs some needed muscle on the front line. He likes to shoot from the wings and uses his speed to position himself for easier, close-in attempts.

Franz majored in business administration at Kansas and was an active member of the Young Republicans and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. He is a bachelor still.

BUCS HELP FOREIGN AID

The Buccaneers, you might say, are contributing to foreign aid. Guard Barry Leibowitz, who shared a unique record by playing in 82 games last season, is working in Israel. The 6-2 guard, after averaging 10 points a game in his rookie year with Pittsburgh, New Jersey and Oakland, was obtained by the Bucs in the trade for Doug Moe and Larry Brown.

Leibowitz, although still the property of the Bucs, has been placed on the team's voluntary retired list. He may return to the Bucs next season.

GOVAN

Opposing teams don't exactly become panic stricken when Gerald Govan flips a shot toward the basket. In fact he is usually allowed to shoot with little concern about the result.

Nonetheless, coaches and players alike will often cringe when they hear Buccaneer partisans strike up the chant, "Go-Go, Go-Go, Go-Go!" It means the tall, bespectacled reserve center is beginning the task of extracting his long, sinewy legs from his warmups and is preparing to check into the game.

Gerald averaged an unimpressive five points while playing in all 78 regular season games in 1967-68 but that wasn't important. Babe McCarthy as well as Go-Go's supporters would have settled for less. Opposing teams, on the other hand, would have given him an average of 10 more if he would have agreed to stay at his end of the court.

Defense and rebounding. Those are Govan's specialties.

Quick-handed and amazingly agile for a man of his height, Gerald not only harasses opposing shooters with his defensive abilities; his mere presence intimidates them and forces them to revert to unnatural or unusual techniques like putting too much arc on a shot or not shooting at all.

His rebounding often limits foes to one missed shot per trip downcourt and the rebounds usually trigger a point-producing fast break.

Gerald doesn't go along with his non-scorer tag. He attributes his low point output to a reluctance to shoot when a better shooter is open. His 39.8 percentage from the floor is anything but atrocious when you consider that many of the misses were the result of hurried tip-in attempts under crowded backboards.

At St. Mary's College in Dodge City, Kan., Govan was the leading rebounder in the NAIA his junior season, sweeping 'em off the boards at a 24.7 clip. He also averaged 20 points that season and was named to the 1963 Small College All-America team.

A 1964 draft choice of the St. Louis Hawks, Gerald went to Italy for a season of Italian pro ball.

Serious minded and a bachelor, Gerald was the Bucs' book-reading and magazine-buying leader and the club's unofficial gin rummy champ last season. He holds a B.A. degree in business administration.

ROBBINS

An ankle injury shelved Austin Robbins for six games midway the 1967-68 season and the Buccaneers had to struggle to break even. It was then that the Bucs and their supporters became convinced of Red's immeasurable value to the team.

Robbins, whose 200 pounds is spread sparingly on a 6-8 frame, was probably the league's most underrated player last season. Without his rebounding and inside scoring threat the Bucs were just another team.

Not only does he plague opposing teams with his soft, accurate touch near the basket, he can carry a defensive man outside. This clears the middle somewhat and affords his teammates a little extra maneuvering room. And Red's accuracy with a one-handed push-shot from the top of the key demands defensive attention.

Robbins was the fifth most accurate two-point field goal shooter in the circuit last season when he connected on 49.5 per cent of his shots. He was also the fifth leading rebounder with a 12.2 average.

His 15.7 scoring average made him the Bucs' No. 3 scorer during the regular season and he was also the No. 3 gun in the play-offs, averaging 17.4 points.

It was in the championship play-offs against Pittsburgh that Red had his best nights. He established a club scoring record by sacking 41 points in the opener of the best-of-seven series and set a club record for rebounding with 24 grabs in the final game.

He was the starting center for the West in the ABA's first All-Star game and was named to the Honorable Mention list on the All-ABA team selected by a panel of sportswriters, sportscasters and league PR men.

An All-America and All-Regional standout at Chipola (Fla.) Junior College, Robbins was signed by the University of Tennessee. He was named first team All-Southeastern Conference after averaging 17 points his senior season.

Red was drafted sixth by the Philadelphia 76ers in 1966, but went to Italy and played professionally for a team in Milan before joining the ABA.

He is 24 and single.

LEE DAVIS

Born—October 11, 1945

Height—6 ft., 8 in.

Weight—240 pounds

Hometown—Raleigh, N. C.

College—North Carolina College ('68)

DAVIS

Lee Davis gives the Buccaneers something they didn't have an abundance of last season — size and muscle under the boards. Young and strong, he is 6-8 and carries 240 pounds with enough authority to push back when pushed.

The muscular Davis came to the Buccaneers from North Carolina College where he performed chiefly as a center and sometimes as a forward.

He is an excellent rebounder and works well around the boards, according to his college coach, Floyd Brown.

Davis is not valuable just because he is big and strong. He is equipped with a fine shooting touch and an eye for the basket. Example: His field goal percentage during four years at NCC was a healthy 52.2.

A 4.9 scoring average for 16 freshman games lowered Lee's career scoring average to 15.3, but he finished with a 21.6 mark his senior season after averaging 14.5 and 16.3 in between.

As a rebounder he averaged close to 15 grabs per game his last three seasons and wound up with a four-year average of 13.0.

Looking at Davis you would think him ideal for a defensive end. As a matter of fact, he was and a good one at that. Davis actually had more football scholarship offers than he did basketball offers and accepted a grid scholarship to NCC. After one season of playing both sports, however, Davis decided to devote all of his energies to the hardwood. It was a decision he has never regretted.

Davis made the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association all-conference first team in both his junior and senior seasons and was twice voted MVP on the squad by his teammates.

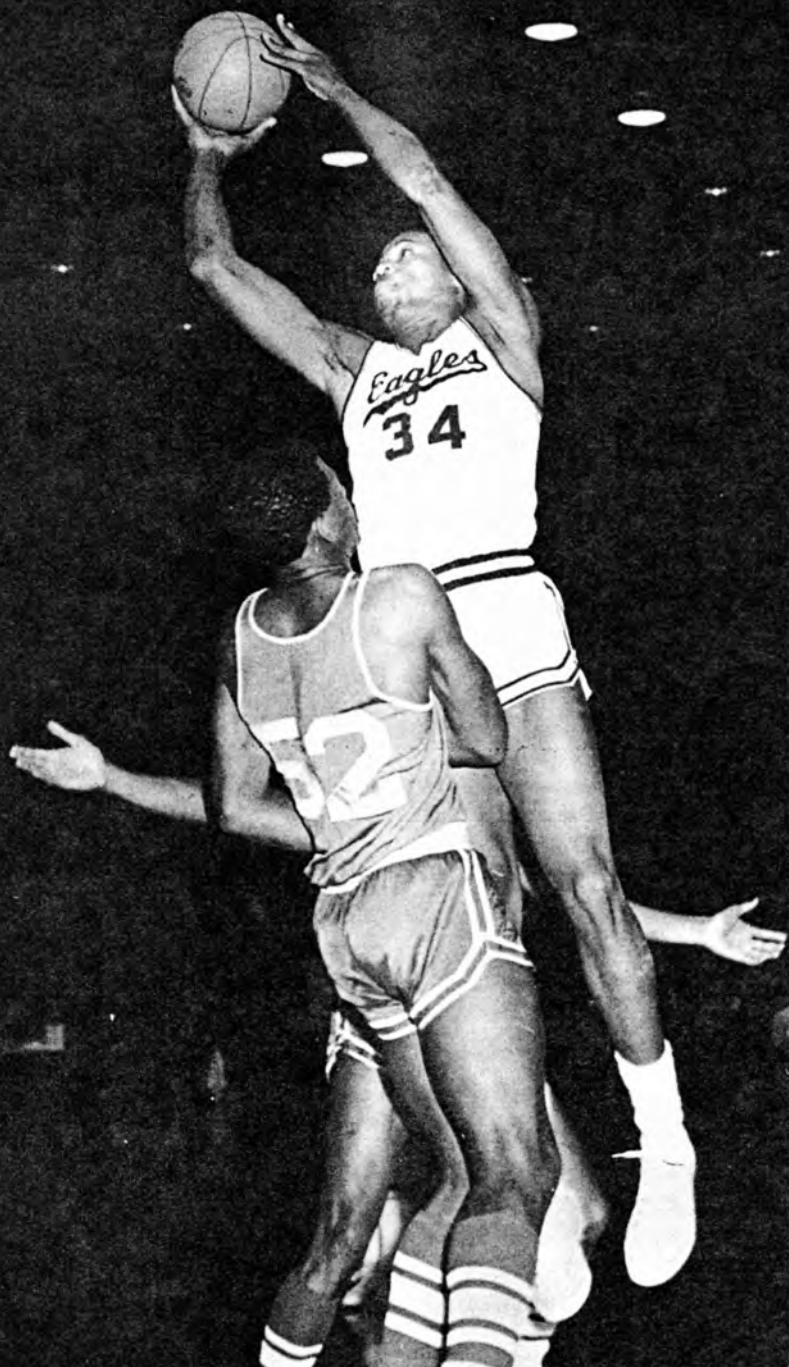

He was drafted in the sixth round by the Buccaneers and 10th by Phoenix of the NBA.

MIKE BUTLER

BUTLER

Mike Butler is what professional basketball in general and the New Orleans Buccaneers in particular need: a crowd-pleasing showman with confidence and talent to back it up.

He can drive, he can shoot, he can handle the ball and he isn't afraid to play defense. Whatever can be done with a basketball Butler can do, behind his back or flat on it.

He was the personality of the Memphis State team even on a rare bad night. The MSU basketball brochure of last season quotes Coach Moe Iba as saying, "Butler right now is the best guard of his size I've ever seen. He might run into somebody who's too big for him but for a small guard there isn't anybody in the country who can play with him . . . No exceptions."

Iba's opinion is supported by these credentials: a 19.2 sophomore scoring average, a 17.1 average as a junior and a 19.4 senior year average. Such consistent scoring on a ball-control, defensive-minded team is extraordinary.

He holds the MSU career scoring record of 1,409 points which produced a three-year average of 18.5. He was voted the Most Valuable Player in the Queen City Tournament his sophomore season and repeated this honor in the 1966 Memphis State Classic.

Mike led the Tigers to a third place finish in the Sugar Bowl Tournament last year and was subsequently named to the all-tourney team.

Concerning Butler's showmanship, a noted Memphis sports columnist wrote: "Although Butler has obviously adjusted to the Iba idea of discipline and defense there remains in his blood the conviction that basketball is just another part of show business like vaudeville and sky-writing. He plays and sings in rock and roll groups and if he has his way will sing right on up to the top where it is lonely but everybody can see you. Butler's swooning possum imitation during a game with Oklahoma City University his sophomore year was listed by the OCU coach, Abe Lemons, as one of several good reasons for breaking off the series at mid-contract."

How Butler will fare in the pros is anybody's guess, but one thing for sure, he'll be interesting to watch.

He is married to the former Sandra Gann of Memphis.

STEVE JONES

Born—October 17, 1942

Height—6 ft., 5 in.

Weight—205 pounds

Hometown—Portland, Ore.

College—Oregon ('64)

JONES

Stephen Howard (Steve) Jones came to the Bucs in an off-season trade that solved a depth problem in the backcourt and amounted to a difference of seven inches in additional height.

The 6-5 Alexandria, La. native could be the tallest guard in the league whereas the Buccaneers received him in exchange for 5-9 Larry Brown, the smallest guard in the circuit.

That the former Oregon star can play pro basketball there is no doubt. He averaged 10.1 points in 76 games for the last place Oakland Oaks while sharing playing time with five other backcourt performers. He also has under his belt additional experience with the AAU's Jamaco Saints in Chicago.

Versatile and strong, the 205-pound Jones performed at forward and guard at Oregon where he averaged 12.1 points for three years and led the Ducks in scoring with a 16.2 average his senior season (1963-64).

He reported to the Oaks as a forward last season but was converted to guard. "It was an adjustment for me, but I feel more comfortable in the backcourt now," he says. "At 6-5, I'm considered a big guard compared with most of them in the league and thus can rebound pretty well and drive to the basket if I get a chance."

List Jones as a defensive specialist and you will likely be involved in a friendly argument. He does have fine defensive ability. For instance in college he was usually assigned to guard the opposing team's top scorer and did so with marked success. The Oaks usually dispatched him to guard the opponents' best or biggest backcourt players last season.

Jones doesn't mind being called a good defensive player, but he winces at the tag, defensive specialist. He is a well rounded offensive player with the ability to shoot from inside or out. Not a dazzling ball handler but he can hit the open man with enough consistency to fit into any type of offensive strategy.

The 26-year-old Portland, Ore. resident is involved in a two-way duel with Mike Butler for the starting guard slot alongside All-Rookie James Jones. Could be the Bucs will have a backcourt twosome billed as the Jones boys, a la the Boston Celtics.

JACK MORELAND

MORELAND

Jack Moreland could add those extra ingredients that go into making a title contending team click—experience, confidence and a steady yet competitive influence.

The senior member of the Buccaneer squad, Moreland has five NBA seasons and one ABA campaign under his belt. He averaged 7.7 points during five seasons (1960-65) with the Detroit Pistons.

Following a two-year layoff, Moreland yielded to the temptation to return to basketball and left a lucrative insurance business to become part of New Orleans' inaugural ABA entry.

Although lacking some of the quickness that helped make him a two-time All-America at Louisiana Tech, Moreland nonetheless played an important role in the Buc's 1967-68 success. He contributed a 14.6 scoring average during the regular season and scored at a 12.2 clip in the play-offs.

An ability to maneuver his 225 pounds between the shooter and the basket and an instinct for strategically positioning himself makes Moreland an asset on defense. The lefthander from Minden, La. seldom scores in giant figures but he can always be counted upon for a clutch basket here and there.

His best scoring night last season was a 29-point effort against Anaheim in Memphis. It was in that game that he threw in the club's longest field goal of the year, a 74-foot hook shot from the top of the key at the opposite end of the court.

Moreland is one of Louisiana's most prized basketball products. At Minden High he averaged over 30 points during a four-year career and set a national prep scoring record of 5,030 points. After attaining All-State honors three times and All-America status twice, he was named "Mr. Basketball" in the prep All-America game in Murray, Ky. in 1956.

He went on to become the third highest scorer in Louisiana Tech history with 1,491 points and a 21.3 average. He still holds the school record for career rebounds with 1,124 and is Tech's No. 3 all-time scorer with 1,491 points.

Jack is married to the former Jeannette Woodard of Minden, La. They have two children, Jennafer, 7, and James Steven, 3.

JASPER WILSON

Born—July 12, 1947

College—Southern University ('68)

WILSON

Potential is what Jasper Wilson has more of than anyone on the Buccaneer roster mainly because he is the team's youngest player. In fact he is more than likely the youngest player in the ABA.

At 21, the experts say, an athlete hasn't reached the peak of his physical development. And considering that a professional basketball player normally doesn't become a finished product until he is 26 or so, one can only imagine the strides that Wilson will make and what his future value may be.

If Wilson's brilliance as a collegiate player carries over into his pro career and if the lean, 6-6 forward from Camden, Ark. has his way the Bucs won't have to wait nearly so long to begin realizing dividends.

The day Jasper signed his contract a local TV sports director asked if he expected any difficulty adjusting to the pro style of play and breaking into the ABA. "I don't think I'll have any trouble breaking into the starting lineup," he said confidently and matter-of-factly.

Jasper has the talent and ability to back up his confidence. His quickness could be a big asset to the Bucs' front line and his shooting accuracy could serve as a ticket to a great deal of playing time.

He averaged 19.1 points over a four-year career at Southern University, scoring at a 23.2 clip his junior year and finishing with a 28-point average last season. He led Southern to an 18-5 record in 1967-68 and didn't score less than 24 points in any of the school's 23 games. His best night was a 45-pointer against Wiley College at home.

"He is a good, rugged player with a lot of good moves and he can shoot as well from outside as he does from close range," says Southern Coach Dick Mack who also labels the 6-6 forward "a terrific rebounder." Wilson averaged 10.9 rebounds over his four years at SU.

Jasper earned numerous honors during his collegiate career. He was twice selected first team All-Southwest Athletic Conference and was chosen MVP on the Southern team his junior and senior seasons. He made third team All-NAIA as a senior and was selected for the Olympic trials.

He is a bachelor.

MARLBERT PRADD

Born—November 17, 1944

Height—6 ft., 3 in.

PRADD

No rookie came into the ABA last season with more impressive college credentials than Marlbert Pradd.

He had led the NAIA in scoring most of the 1966-67 season and finished a shade below the top with an eye-opening 43.8 average.

The Bucs, expecting big things, drafted Marlbert high and signed him to a lucrative three-year contract.

Pradd's failure to figure prominently in the Bucs' 1967-68 campaign was disappointing to Pradd, his supporters and the club. And it was through no fault of Pradd or the Bucs.

Marlbert was simply the victim of his size and the position he played in college. At Dillard University, Pradd was a 6-3 forward and a great one. He averaged 32.1 points as a freshman, 35.4 as a sophomore and 36.1 his junior year.

Pradd accomplished all of this as a forward. When he joined the Bucs he was faced with either having to play behind three forwards more physically adapted to professional basketball or converting into a guard.

Undertaking such a transition to a totally strange position is task enough and to accomplish it in the pro ranks along with seasoned backcourt performers is high onto impossible.

Consequently, Pradd saw limited duty last season, appearing in 29 games as a spot player.

A native of Chicago where he was a three-year standout at Carver High, Marlbert is married to the former Dianne Magee of Bogalusa.

SIX 1967-68 BUCS MISSING

Six players who were members of New Orleans' first pro basketball team at the conclusion of the 1967-68 season are missing from the current squad.

Forward Doug Moe and guard Larry Brown, of course, are still playing in the league, having been dealt to the Oakland Oaks during the off-season.

Forward Ron Widby is still in the pro ranks, but in another sport. He is the punter for the Dallas Cowboys of the NFL and has decided not to pursue a basketball career.

Jesse Branson has retired to devote full time to his textile business in Burlington, N. C. Leland Mitchell has retired to concentrate on his insurance business in Starkville, Miss. and John Dickson has turned to a business career in Houston, Texas.

Two players who started the first of the season with the Bucs are out of the pro ranks. Red Stroud is coaching at John Curtis Junior College in New Orleans and John Comeaux is serving an Army hitch.

DAVID WILLIAMS

Born—September 27, 1946

WILLIAMS

David Williams is a product of the Bucs' pre-season tryout sessions, but his potential as a professional player came as no surprise to Coach Babe McCarthy.

"He was one of the two best prospects I ever recruited out of high school," says McCarthy, who lured Williams to Mississippi State. The other one, needless to mention, was Bailey Howell.

Upon arriving at Mississippi State, Williams quickly lived up to expectations by pacing the 1964-65 freshman team in scoring with a 19.7 average. Having left MSU after the 1964-65 season, McCarthy didn't coach Williams during his varsity career.

Meanwhile, David broke into Southeastern Conference varsity competition with prominence his sophomore season, averaging 19.7 points after scoring only one point in his first game. He ranked fifth in the SEC in both scoring and rebounding.

As a junior, Williams led his team in scoring for the second year in a row with a 15.7 average and led in rebounds with a 9.8 average.

Last season Williams closed out his career with a 13.7 scoring mark, giving him a three-year average of 16.0 and a total of 772 rebounds in 76 games.

Williams is regarded as an exceptionally accurate shooter for his size, especially from outside. He is strong on the boards and does a good job defensively.

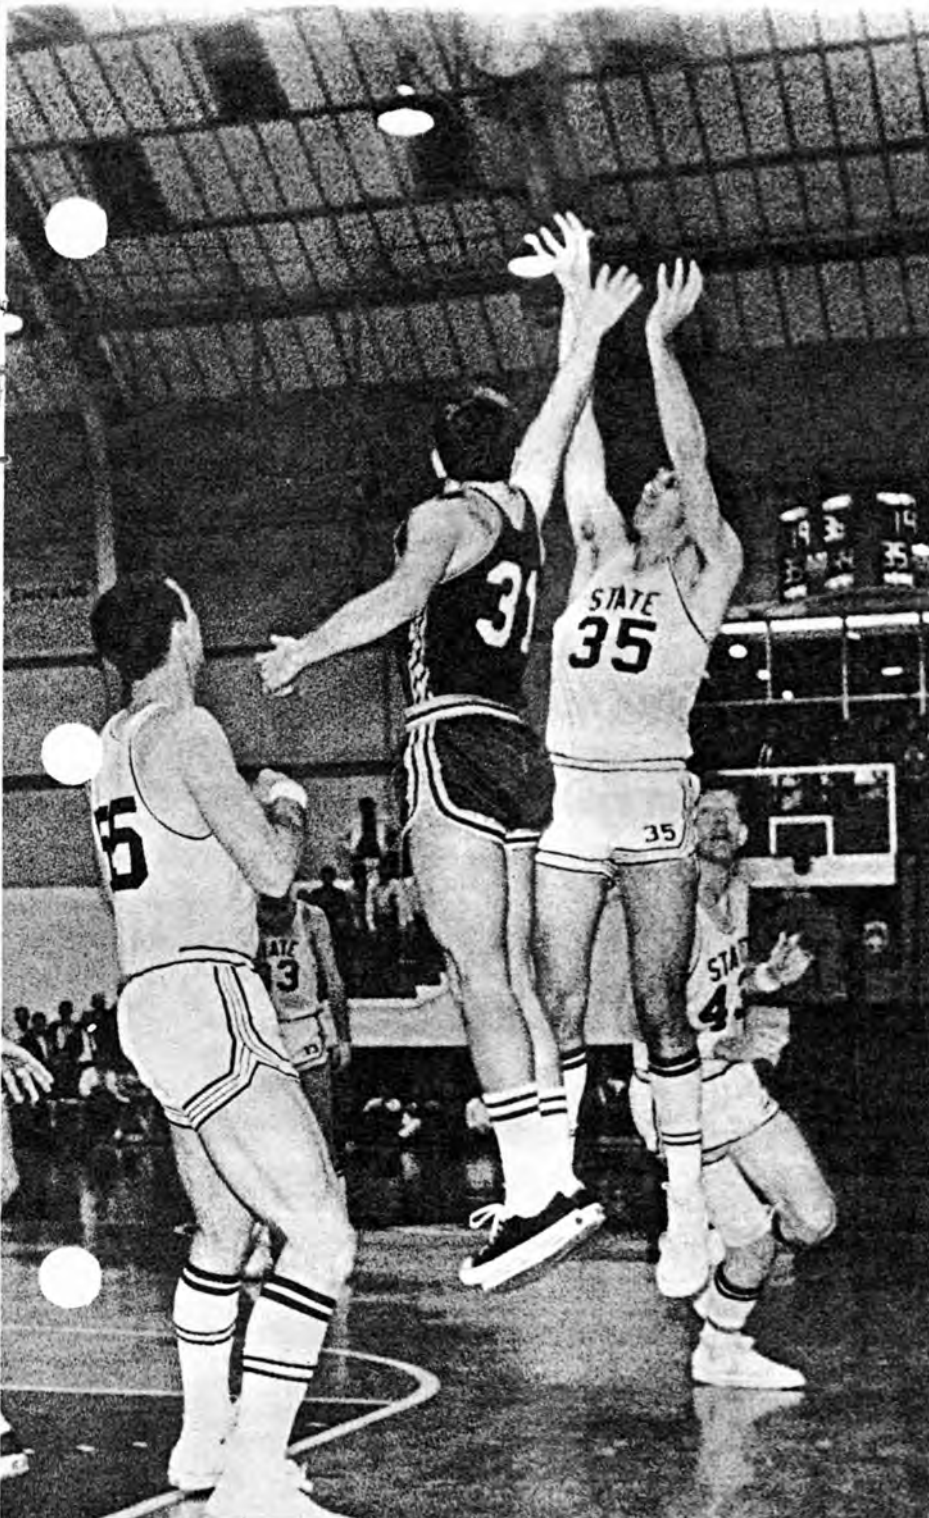

Williams was drafted eighth by both the Buccaneers and the Cincinnati Royals of the NBA. He is 22 and is married to the former Cheri Smith of Byram.

GLYNN SAULTERS

Born—February 10, 1945

SAULTERS

Perhaps the Buccaneers are a bit premature in their excitement over Glynn Saulters, but the All-American from Northeast Louisiana State is the type of player that stirs excitement.

As the opening of the 1968-69 season neared, Saulters had not so much as tried on a Buccaneer uniform for size nor had he worked out with the team. In fact he hadn't even turned pro by signing a Buccaneer contract because he was performing in the 1968 Summer Olympics in Mexico City with the United States Olympic basketball team.

Yet, the Buccaneer brass became excited just by the mere chance of adding scoring potential of incredible proportions to the team's backcourt arsenal. This came about in mid-September when the Bucs purchased from Denver the negotiation rights to Saulters.

Last season, the 6-2 backcourt bomber wound up a brilliant career at Northeast by averaging 31.3 points while connecting on 52.6 per cent of his field goal attempts. This outstanding senior year performance enabled Saulters to win an unprecedented second straight Gulf States Conference scoring title and establish a new GSC career scoring record of 2,134 points.

While at Northeast, Saulters staked claim to 15 school records and set GSC marks for the most consecutive free throws made in a single game (22) and the most career fields goals (773). His four-year-scoring average of 23.5 is also a league record.

Louisiana sports writers and conference coaches picked Saulters as the GSC "Player of the Year" the last two seasons. He was also selected GSC Athlete of the Year in 1967-68. He made the UPI Little All-America first team in 1967-68 and was twice chosen on the AP's Little All-America third team. He was named to the All-GSC first team three straight times after making the all-conference second team in 1964-65.

After becoming the first player from a Louisiana college or university to be selected to a U.S. Olympic basketball team, Saulters warmed up for his Mexico City appearance by touring Russia and Yugoslavia with the U.S. National AAU team last summer.

Glynn, a native of Minden, La., is married to the former Mary Alice Scriber of Lisbon, La.

LEE

It doesn't pay to foul David Lee, a free throw shooter deluxe whose accuracy from the line earned him the NCAA free throw crown in 1964. The USF standout hit 108 of 121 tosses for an 89.3 average and edged Miami's Rick Barry for the title.

Lee joined the Bucs the week before the season opener after being released by talent-loaded Oakland. He scored 372 points and grabbed 184 rebounds in 54 games with the Oaks in 1967-68. He paced an Oakland win over the Bucs with a 29-point night Feb. 1. His 86 per cent from the line (120 for 140) would have landed him in second place in the ABA free throw race had he attempted enough shots to qualify.

Lee was kept until the final cut by the San Francisco Warriors who drafted him No. 7 in 1964. "I have never had a guy try harder," said then Coach Alex Hannum of Lee who had played in all of the Warriors' exhibition games before the cut.

Because of his all-out effort every minute he's on the court, Lee is often called "Mr. Determination." His aggressiveness around the boards and on defense earned him another tag, "The Bruiser."

AMERICAN BASKETBALL ASSOCIATION PLAYING COURT DIAGRAM

THE FIRST SEASON

Pro basketball will never go over, the skeptics said, in New Orleans where football, Dixieland music and red beans and rice are No. 1 and everything else secondary.

That was during the summer of 1967 when the newly founded American Basketball Association was being organized amidst widespread skepticism "It'll never get off the ground," the critics were saying.

On May 1, 1968, Pittsburgh Coach Vince Cazzetta, whose team had just evened the championship series with New Orleans at 3-3 before 7,200 boisterous Buccaneer fans, said: "This enthusiasm down here is just great for the ABA and it'll make New Orleans the best franchise in the league."

The ABA had indeed gotten off the ground and so had pro basketball in New Orleans.

It was a struggle, that first season, especially for the owners. Nevertheless, historians of the sports world have since recorded that the debut of the upstart new league and its multi-colored ball and three-point field goal was a success.

It turned out, quite surprisingly to many hardwood authorities, that New Orleans had played a gigantic role in the ABA's rise from obscurity to prominence.

The Buccaneers, so named by New Orleans Mayor Victor Schiro, shared in several "firsts" which helped give life to the new league. The Bucs captured the first Western Division title and surged to the finals of the first championship play-off series.

The team's coach, personable Babe McCarthy, coached in the ABA's first All-Star game and four Buccaneers played for his Western Division squad. One of them, Larry Brown, was presented the game's MVP award by Commissioner George Mikan'who, ironically, had been the NBA's first All-Star MVP.

"We couldn't have done without anybody off our starting lineup and won the way we did," answered McCarthy to an inquiry concerning his team's MVP. "They were all valuable and so were several of our reserves."

Avoiding mass tryouts, McCarthy had handpicked his players. "I knew the players I wanted and I wanted them to know they had a place on the team. This made them happier and free to concentrate on learning the things we had to learn."

Before practice began the Bucs were stripped of two prized signees—Clyde Lee and Bobby Love of the NBA—by court rulings. Minus the all-important big man (the tallest starter was 6-8) McCarthy installed as a basic offense variations of the shuffle, a complex attack dependent upon teamwork and cohesiveness.

ord and the momentum carried over into the regular season.

New Orleans' first season in pro basketball officially began Oct. 19 when the Bucs defeated Houston, 120-112. Five months and 77 games later Houston was in town again, still trying for its first win in 10 games against New Orleans. The Bucs won that one, too, and the 114-88 triumph nailed down the Western Division championship and sent the club winging into the play-offs.

Sandwiched in between the two significant wins over Houston and interspersed among the 17 play-off games that followed were key moments of chargin and hope, anxiety and elation.

Jack Moreland and James Jones led a 101-97 win over Dallas at Memphis Oct. 27 and the victory, coupled with Oakland's loss to Indiana on the West Coach, elevated the Buccaneers into the Western Division lead, a position they were to hold the rest of the season.

The Bucs played five games in Memphis and they included the team's most one-sided win of the season (a 128-99 whipping of Pittsburgh) and the club's longest field goal (a 74-foot hook shot by Moreland that turned the tide in a win over Anaheim).

Apathy of Memphis fans toward the Bucs prompted club president Charles Smither to shift the last six of 11 scheduled Memphis appearances to other arenas. One of the transplanted games drew 5,200 in Jackson, Miss. and another attracted 3,100 in Monroe, La.

Attendance in New Orleans, meanwhile, doubled from a 1,500 average in the first half of the season to a 3,000 average the last half. The average of 5,000 fans for the nine play-off games at Loyola Field House brought smiles and comments of confidence and optimism from Smither, the club's No. 1 stockholder, and Maurice Stern, the team's treasurer.

Although behind at the box office most of the season, the Bucs kept winning on the court. Using teamwork and scoring balance (six players maintained double figure averages) the Buccaneers opened an eight-game lead by mid-December.

Other teams around the league began to improve and victory became increasingly tougher to come by, especially on the road. But, it was on the road during the last week of the season when the McCarthymen proved their mettle.

Having to win their last three games to clinch the title, the Bucs copped a 102-92 win at Oakland on the strength of Red Robbins' 27 points. Two nights later in Anaheim Doug Moe and James Jones combined for 52 points to spark a 105-89 romp.

Then it was back home for the title-clinching finale against Houston.

New Orleans took the Western Division semi-final play-off series over Denver, 3-2, with Larry Brown's 24 points and 10 assists triggering the 102-97 clincher.

Dallas was disposed of four games to one in the Western finals and it was a 74-point, three-way assault by Brown, Jones and Robbins that produced a 108-107 verdict in the deciding game.

The see-saw championship series with explosive Pittsburgh was a fitting climax to the ABA's inaugural season. The host Pipers took the opener, 120-112, despite a club record 41 points by Robbins. New Orleans evened it at one-all with a 109-100 triumph supported by Brown and Jones who combined for 52 points.

Robbins' 30 points and Jones' 26 sparked a 109-101 win before 6,310 in New Orleans, but the Pipers rode Connie Hawkins' 47 points to squeeze out a 106-105 overtime win the next night to square the series at 2-2.

The Bucs reclaimed the lead at Pittsburgh in the fifth game and had designs on wrapping up the title as the series shifted to New Orleans for game No. 6.

Connie Hawkins, despite a knee injury that had shelved him in game 5, scored 41 points as the Pipers overcame a 13-point halftime deficit to take a 118-112 win.

On May 4 and before nearly 12,000 fans in Pittsburgh the Pipers exploded into a 21-point lead late in the third period. The Bucs made a gallant stab at coming back, closing the gap to five points twice in the final two minutes. But, two costly turnovers and Moe's banishment from the game on technicals thwarted the rally. Pittsburgh claimed a 122-113 victory and along with it the first ABA championship.

THE FIRST ALL STAR GAME

Before an enthusiastic crowd of 10,872 and in view of millions more on television, the East defeated the West, 126-120, in the American Basketball Association's first All-Star classic.

The site was Hinkle Fieldhouse on the Butler University campus in Indianapolis, Ind. The date was Jan. 9, 1968.

Some called it the day the ABA made the grade. Others referred to it as a significant breakthrough for the new league. "The NBA waited until its fifth season to play its first All-Star game," noted one veteran observer, "and that game (played March 2, 1951 in Boston) drew 10,094 fans."

The game was a masterpiece as far as entertainment goes. It was close all the way and the East rallied in the closing minutes for its comeback victory, much to the delight of the partisan Indiana rooters.

New Orleans followers, naturally, were pulling for the West. Babe McCarthy was the West team's coach and four Buccaneers were in the action.

Although on the losing end, the pro-West crowd and especially the Buccaneer fans received consolation when Larry Brown was voted the recipient of the Most Valuable Player award and along with it a red Malibu convertible.

Ironically, Brown was presented the MVP award by Commissioner George Mikan, the first MVP in the NBA's inaugural All-Star classic back in '51.

The West team, featuring the Bucs' Red Robbins and Doug Moe in the starting lineup, trailed 30-29 after one quarter and by a 61-59 margin at halftime. Moe scored 13 points in the third period to keep the West within one point, 92-91, going into the fourth stanza.

Enter Larry Brown, the smallest player in the league and a guy selected as a last-minute replacement for Army-bound Bob Verga. The 5-9 sparkplug scored 12 points and led a West attack that at one juncture appeared to have the East on the ropes.

Brown's layup made it 108-104, West, with 6:52 to go. Suddenly, Minnesota's 6-9 Mel Daniels came alive with seven points and several key rebounds down the stretch to turn the tide.

BANKAMERICARD

... Make it all the more enjoyable by using your BankAmericard* at every home game. Or purchase your season ticket with it. BankAmericard is the first, genuine all-purpose credit card that has come to the New Orleans area. A BankAmericard charge account is good not only at all Bucs games, but at 3,000 top-flight New Orleans area stores that are waiting to offer you automatic charge accounts. Each month, NBC will send you a single statement for all your purchases, and, if you like, you can extend your payments over several months.

There are no dues to pay, no membership fee to get a BankAmericard. And you don't have to be an NBC member. If you don't already have your BankAmericard, stop at any NBC office or at your favorite merchant's and fill out an application. For information, call 482-5721.
